5 common air conditioning issues addressed

FOSTER CITY, Calif., July 21, 2020. As many work from home during high summer heat, a well-functioning air conditioning (AC) system can be essential for comfort and cost-containment. Homeowners can save money and boost AC performance by handling certain minor repairs and maintenance themselves and should also recognize when it's critical to call a professional.

Modernize recently updated advice to help homeowners get the most out of their air conditioning units and save money performing some do-it-yourself maintenance and repairs. At the same time, homeowners are cautioned about when it is wise to connect with an HVAC professional. The guidance covers five common issues:

1. AC unit won't power on
2. AC not blowing cold air
3. Unusually loud AC noise
4. High energy bill
5. Troubleshooting failure

"While certain air conditioning repairs can be attempted by homeowners, many issues are best left to professionals," explains Gregg Hicks, vice president and spokesperson for Modernize. "We prepared guidance identifying the simple repairs and maintenance that most homeowners should be able to perform independently and offer recommendations on when a contractor should be consulted and facilitate that introduction."
